I would be disposed in any event to investigate the matter were it not that the verdict of the jury was advisory only, and independently of the jury's findings I believe that upon the evidence adduced upor the trial no decision could be reached other than that Thaw is now sane. I agree with your observation that if my 'decision as to Thaw's sanity was reached uncontrolled by the verdict of this advisory jury, although in second with it * * then the misconduct of a juror or a jury would not affect the legality of the decision reached by me.

In the Thaw habeas corpus case, however, the jury was merely called to assist Justice Hendrick to reach a decision, and therefore it is my belief that Justice Hendrick alone was injured by the misconduct of the jurors, if any. Because of this I called Justice Hendrick's attention to the interview."

In his letter to Justice Hendrick the Attorney-General said in part:

"The interview with this juror shows plainty that when he entered the jury box he entertained a preconceived opinion of the case, which was such that his answers, given upon his examination as to his qualifications to sit as a juror were at least untrue in spirit.

"Furthermore, the trend of his statements indicates that the advice of the jury given you at your request, at least,
